

The Pain of Death

The death of our family members, whether they are of the human-kind or animal-kind, is a painful process. When it comes to our pets, we are completely responsible for the care they receive near the end of their life, as well as for the final arrangements of their bodies. The choices we face can be overwhelming, especially since the emotional ties to our pets are so strong and powerful.

Our goal at Pets Remembered Cremation is to help pet lovers through the difficult process of saying goodbye, and caring for the body in a manner that will best aid people through the pain and grief of their significant loss.

We offer personal attention to both pet lovers and their deceased pet by offering gentle and sensitive care to each family at an affordable price. Some people want to bring their pet directly to our pet loss facility and take time to say goodbye prior to the cremation, and even witness the gentle placement of their pet into the crematory. Others request that we pick up their pet from their home or vet clinic, and return the ashes directly to them. Our desire is to do whatever is best for each family.

With respect to the cremation, we provide private, on-at-a-time cremation only. We do not store pets in plastic bags or a freezer, and we cremate each pet within hours of their arrival at our facility. We are unique in our offering of only private cremation and a return of the ashes, in a respectable wooden urn (not tin or cardboard), within 24 hours. Other cremation facilities typically offer group cremation (pets are cremated in mass) or separate cremation (each pet is placed in a separate corner of the crematory and done together, although there is no guarantee that the ashes you receive are your pet's ashes), with a typical wait time of a week to ten days for the return of the ashes, which can prolong the anguish.

Our pet loss facility is surrounded by green trees and shrubs. It is clean and our doors are always open for you to come and see what we are about, especially prior to your pet's death so you can have peace of mind knowing that you, and your pet, will be well cared for when the time comes.

The Pain of Death

Our backgrounds have prepared us well to be sensitive and caring in your time of need. Skip has thirty years of experience as a funeral director. Carol has over twenty years of experience as a pastor and hospice chaplain. We have found that the death of a pet is often as significant of a loss to people as human members of their family, and we want to help people through their time of loss as best we can to give them peace of mind.
